HAS THE SHOE YOU WEAR A NAME?

There is much in a name, when it is a good name. If the shoe you are wearing hasn't a name, and it pinches your tender foot, you will not be blamed for giving it the name it deserves, whether it sounds well or not. If the shoe doesn't fit you, and it has a name, forget it.

When you find the shoe that fits—fits from the time you put it on—so that you wear it right away with real comfort, take careful note of the name of that shoe. Remember it as the name of a friend. If it is "INVICTUS" it is a faithful friend—true to its comfortable shape and style to the end of its long life.

A Glimpse of the Home Life of the Great Essayist.

Carlyle is in his forty-third year when I first knew him. His usual working hours then were over for the day between two and three o'clock; and he was not disinclined to accept friends that might call then, for a few minutes' talk with him, just before he set out for his afternoon walk.

A preferable time, however, was the evening. If you dropped in about, or a little after, seven o'clock, you found Carlyle and Mrs. Carlyle at tea in the drawing-room, and were welcome to a cup yourself, with a slice of bread and butter or biscuit—jamb generally on the table. If you were later, you missed the tea, but had talk so long as you chose to stay, and might see Carlyle fill his pipe and smoke it once or twice in the course of an evening, and even, if you were in his good graces and capable of communion with him in that particular, be invited to join him. His pipe, then and always, were long, clay pipes of Glasgow make, with green-glazed tips for the mouth, his tobacco, if the same then as it was afterwards, was of a strong and rather harsh kind, which he called "Free-smoking York River." The pipe he was using at the time I took a new pipe every day, or perhaps, longer, from the stock he kept somewhere in a box, usually in the corner of the fireplace, within the fender, ready for his further service; and a pipe of this kind, with its tobacco, represented his larger supply, when all was out of sight somewhere, stood ready on the mantelpiece, or sometimes on the table.

He was very methodical and practical in all such matters, displaying a gentleness of any sort, and carrying a love of order even into his smoking arrangements. Indeed, if he was more than one guest present, or if the guests were a stranger, he would go out for his smoke into the back-garden, and return when it was over, and the summer evenings the back-garden was the established smoking-place, and he would take his guests or guests of his own, and walking with them up and down the grass-plot.

I forget whether the smoking was within doors, he had a six-tube habit—when he was not smoking afterwards—of reclining on the hearth-rug while he smoked so that the puff of smoke from the chimney rather than come into the room.

But Mrs. Carlyle, while as orderly as himself, and keeping everything tidy there, was tolerant to the utmost of whatever might be his whim in this matter; and it was pretty to see him sometimes, when he was in a pleased humor and there was no one there to cause ceremony, present the pipe gallantly to her own lips, for the honor of a consecrating sniff. This he called "tendering her the value of peace." I must have seen him do more than once within the first few months of my acquaintance, for my footstool at Chyne Row had gradually become such as to justify pretty frequent visits of an evening—perhaps about once in three weeks on an average—and I was always received with a continuation of the original kindness.

Only on one occasion, in those early months of my acquaintance, do I remember a gruff reception from Carlyle; and that was when one or two friends of mine, who were on a visit to London and had separate introductions to him, formed a party for a point call upon him in the afternoon, and persuaded me to go with them. Mrs. Carlyle was away; he was in a bad humor; one of the party introduced a topic not to his taste, and was rather combative in asserting his own views of it; and I could see that Carlyle wished all you at the door. From "Memories of London in the Forties," by David Masson.

Not Very Flattering.

Mr. John Hassall, the famous black and white artist, who, together with "Punch" editor Mr. Walter Pater, is responsible for the very laudable adage, "London in the Year 2000," as the Festival of Empire, Crystal Palace, tells an amusing story against himself in connection with one of his portraits of the artist. Then a deep glow clouded his usually cheerful countenance. For in the lady's description he recognized his well-known "Newmarket" poster, which had a flat, dull background, with two horses on the top horizon line.

HOW TO OBTAIN

A GOOD COLOR

A TREATMENT TO RESTORE THE BLOOD SUPPLY THAT HAS BEEN MOST SUCCESSFUL

There is only this to tell people who are pale, weak and bloodless. You are pale and weak because you haven't enough blood and you want to be better until your blood supply is increased. You should not lose any time in increasing your blood supply, for people who neglect anemia, of ten slip into a deadly decline. When you have increased your blood supply you have a good color, to have lost that tired, breathless feeling, to have a good appetite and get good nourishment from your food. Now the only quick and easy way to get a supply of new, rich, red blood is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new blood, and this new blood coursing through the veins, brings health and strength to every organ of the body. It is the body, making weak, ailing people, bright, active and strong. This has been proved in the case of a man, which the case of Mrs. George Clark, Abbottford, B. C., is a fair sample. Mrs. Clark, who was really suffering two years and six months in a hospital training for a nurse, I began to feel in health, was very pale, and least exertion would leave me out of breath. After a graduate I came to British Columbia to take up my profession as a nurse. The first case I took I found I was not able to go on with my work. Doctors' tonics and food did not act on my own judgment I purchased a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished them I was really surprised at the result. The color came back to my face. I gained in strength and by the time I had used nine boxes I was back at my work as a nurse. I have since married, but still have my friendly feeling for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cent box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EFFECT OF THE TARIFF ON PRICES

Canadian Manufacturer Does Not Impose on the Duties

An erroneous impression exists in the minds of many Western people that the manufacturer of Canada takes advantage of the tariff by raising his selling price by the full amount of the duty, with which he is protected from foreign competition. Facts show that the Canadian manufacturer does not, and could not effectively, do such a thing. The home manufacturer, today, does seven times as much business in Canada as the Canadian manufacturer. Would the factors of Canada be able to secure that much more business than the foreign competitor if prices were so inflated? No they would not, and the main purpose of the tariff is not to rob, but to protect.

That the manufacturer should be able to improve the quality of his product and at the same time reduce the price to the consumer may at first seem incredible, but it all hinges upon the output. Every manufacturing operation whether large or small involves a certain amount of stationary overhead expense including such items as rent, heat, light, insurance, taxes, office expenses, superintendence, etc. If these expenses have to be met out of the returns from a small output it follows that the proportion carried by each unit of production will be comparatively high. But if on the other hand they can be spread over a large output, then the proportion carried by each unit of production may become insignificantly small. Generally speaking the larger the output the lower the cost of production and the cheaper the price to the consumer, hence the advantage of a tariff which secures the home market or at least the bulk of it to the home manufacturer.

A few examples will suffice to illustrate how this works out. In 1878 a Canadian company began the manufacture of buggies. In 1879 they sold all their output at a bargain, for which farmers paid them from $160 to $170 each. Last year in various kinds of wheel vehicles they had sold over 15,000 and were able to offer the farmer for $80 a far better buggy than the one he used to have for $170. In 1878 the price of sugar was nine and ten cents a pound retail; today it is under five cents. The cost of sugar in 1878 sold at from $270 to $300; today the farmer gets a lighter and more compact binder that will last longer for $125. In 1878, single reapers retailed in Ontario at from $160 to $180; today the best reaper retails at from $60 to $65.

Sure Return

"Out to luncheon—back in five minutes," read the sign on the door. "Are you sure you will get back that soon?" asked the anxious caller. "Yes," said the wise office boy. "He ain't got the price of ten minutes' lunch in his clothes."—Toledo Blade.

The transition from winter's cold to summer's heat frequently puts a strain upon the system that produces internal complications, always painful and often serious. A common form of disorder is constipation, to which many are prone in the spring and summer. The very best medicine to use in subduing this painful ailment is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's "Beverly Cordial." It is a standard remedy, sold everywhere.

The Canada Thistle

The excellent growth this season of all kinds of crops has been the cause of remark by nearly every one in the country, and undoubtedly while we have now had sufficient moisture everything is in excellent shape for a splendid crop, even of weeds.

A gentleman who lives a mile or two east of the town was complaining to us last week of the fine crop of Canada thistles which are getting a good hold right in his neighborhood, and he stated that he thought that most of the farmers on whose farms he had seen these thistles did not know they were there because they had not examined their fields thoroughly. He had found some on his place and this made him suspicious, so he examined his whole farm and was surprised at what he found.

This state of affairs should not exist another day. The Canada thistle, as is well known, is one of the worst weeds which Canada has, and some farmers in the eastern part of Canada have been nearly ruined by allowing this weed to get a hold on their farms. They should, in justice to their neighbors, look into this matter and pull up every Canada thistle they find on their place as it is one of the worst weeds there is to spread.

While the subject of weeds is up for discussion the mustard plant might as well be mentioned. It was the writer's privilege a few days ago to take a short auto excursion south-east and east of Didsbury, and a surprising state of affairs seemed to exist in lots of good grain fields that he passed. The surprising fact was that the amount of mustard weed to be seen in these fields will yield a much larger percentage of weed seed than grain if allowed to mature.

It is to be hoped that the farmers and those in authority will make strenuous efforts to eradicate these weeds before they become a hydra-headed monster which will surely cause them a big loss in their farm returns.

Electric Light Plant Site

According to reports a committee has been appointed by the town Council to enquire into sites for the electric light plant.

We understand that the idea is to have this plant close to a railway spur so that the machinery and gasoline necessary for the plant can be more easily unloaded.

This may be all right, but it is to be hoped that the Council have figured out this proposition.

We already own some good central lots at the fire hall and if the plant was erected there it would save the expense of buying more land, and would also be the best location in our estimation for the distribution of power, as it is in the center of the town. As far as saving in the cost of drayage for machinery and oil is concerned, after the installation of the plant there is only the oil to consider, and perhaps the saving

We have heard it said, "What a fine showing for the town it would make to have this plant near the railroad." This is all right, but we are not putting in this plant to boom real estate. ETERNAL LOVE

A Test That Tried Two and Found One Wanting

By F. TOWNSEND SMITH
Copyright by American Press Association, Ill.

Ellen Stanley believed that love should be immortal, that true love was immortal. It did not recognize true love. It divorced only occurred between those who had made marriage of convenience. It would argue that incompatibility was only to be found among those who married without love. Ellen Stanley knew well that many marriages between those who were infatuated with each other turned out unfortunately. Following ingenuously, she bit upon a plan of determining whether a case of love was true love or spurious. She treasured this plan in her mind for a long while, and when Ernest Gregory offered himself to her and she accepted him she resolved to put it into practice.

Her scheme was to break herself, so far as her lover was concerned, out of the world. He was to understand that she was dead. If he loved her with the love which was immortal he would never unite again. Having proved that he was hers and hers only for all eternity, whether in the flesh or in the spirit, she would return to him, and their mortal union would be a perfect one.

Miss Stanley was an orphan and possessed an income sufficient to enable her to go to some remote country and disappear. She made a will so that after her supposed death her property could not be administered until after she had had time to return to life and placed cash in a foreign bank sufficient for her expenses during her supposed residence in the spirit world.

When Miss Stanley informed her lover that she was about to go abroad he was much surprised and chagrined.

THE WOMAN COVERED HER FACE WITH HER HANDS

Very much in love with her, he felt that the separation would be trying to him. She said him that there was an immortal love; that they were united not only for this world, but for the next. Therefore a separation of a few months should not be considered of much moment. She realized that after their marriage no opportunity would likely occur to change their minds. She was tied down to the practice of his profession she had better make the trip before their marriage.

A refusal to accept of this would have been tantamount to selfishness, so Gregory gave his consent, resolving to go out without his love as best he could till her return. When he bade her goodby on the steamer he said to her:

"If you meet any one over there you like better than me do not hesitate to sacrifice me. I love you too well to stand in the way of your happiness."

"Kismet," she said impressively. "You know that I believe in an eternal love. My love for you is of this kind. It only remains to be seen whether yours for me is the same. If anything happens to me you are free to marry another. If you do it will indicate that your love for me was not the kind that I require. But heaven grant that your love for the wife you take may prove everlasting."

There was something so spiritually elevating about these words that Gregory felt that if he lost her his life on earth would be blighted. If he had known that his love was to be submitted to a test he would have laughed at it as unwise and absurd. He bade his fiancee goodby and rushed aboard his first emotion get the better of him. Miss Stanley went to Paris, where she ordered her trousseau. Her lover had shown such unmistakable signs of constancy that she did not doubt he would stand the test to which she intended to subject him. At any rate, she was ready to take the risk of procuring her wedding garments. From Paris she went to Gibraltar and crossed the strait to Tangier. There she fitted out an expedition to go on to the desert of Sahara.

When Ernest the Arab whom Miss Stanley had hired for the expedition returned to Tangier and reported that robbers had attacked the little caravan, murdered the American lady traveler and taken everything that belonged to her.

In reporting the case the American consul at Tangier said that Miss Stanley had doubtless been murdered by her own attendants; that it was a common occurrence for a traveler to be thus dispatched, his belongings appropriated, and in order to escape punishment the men he had hired would lay the blame on the robbers that infest the desert.

When Ernest Gregory heard of his fiancee's death his friends feared for a time that he would lose his reason. He sailed at once for Gibraltar, crossed to Tangier and Africa, and there those who had been with Miss Stanley at the time of the tragedy, with a view to discovering if he could secure the body. The remains at once caught attention for a plan for making a coffin. They said that they had buried Miss Stanley's body in a certain cave and would go and get it for a consideration. Gregory tried them in order to escape them. They dug up a corpse, but decomposition forbade opening the casket which contained it. However, they showed Gregory that the bones which were the remains of the American lady traveler to convince any one not conversant with the Bedouin conscience. Gregory took the bones to America and deposited it in a cemetery where he could visit it frequently. Within a few months a beautiful white marble shaft arose over the grave with an appropriate inscription. On the reverse were the words, "Immortal Love."

Miss Stanley had tied up her property for five years and they passed without a word having been heard from her. When the time approached for an administration of her property attorneys employed by her relations began to take measures for a division of her estate. One morning Gregory, who was in London, as she had indicated she would have him live, was traversing her resting place on earth and looking forward to his reunion with her in heaven. One day he was laying flowers on her grave, and, looking up, he saw a woman and a little girl between three and four years of age gazing at him.

"Are you Helen in the flesh or Helen in spirit?" he asked.

"Neither flesh or spirit, the woman covered her face with her hands."

"Speak,"

"Mamma," cried the little girl, "she's the mother of my baby."

Gregory advanced and, taking the woman's wrist in his hands, exposed her face.

"Yes, you are Helen," he said, "and living."

"Mamma, come away."

"Mamma," exclaimed Gregory, "is this your mamma?"

"Yes. Come, mamma; let us go away from here."

"I saw it all," said Gregory. "You left me to witness the death of a life. You wished to know if my love for you was of that immortal kind you coveted. Look!" pointing to the shaft and the flowers on the grave. "Are you satisfied?"

When he ceased to speak there was only silence. Then, with a gasp, his tone changed. Laying the child in his arms, he kissed her and said:

"Fardon me, little one, for troubling your mamma. It is all over. Come, let us go away from here; the spot is hateful."

Leading the child, she started down a path that led to an exit from the cemetery, the woman walking beside him. Before entering the crowded street he stopped and said:

"The word. As I have lived so life I always. What with you has been mortal with me is everlasting."

Then they passed from the inclosure he never entered again.

ter of the desert.

He would probably have remained buried for the rest of her life had it not been that children came to her, and it became necessary for her to exist in life in order to transmit to them their inheritance. She had lived in countries where she was not liable to be long dead, but she became weary for her to return to America to prevent her property being given to claimants relatives. She had returned to America, and, having heard that her "immortal" lover had erected a shaft over her remains, she had been seized with a morbid curiosity to discover the truth. She had found him at her grave and decided to take her punishment then and there.

Gregory remained wedded to an immortal love. There was nothing worldly in it. The woman she had loved died before him and left him a share of her property. She had decided to accept it, turning it over to her children. He had been disappointed in his worldly love, and with his spiritual love these things which pertained to earth could have nothing in common. He died as he had lived—in a wedlock of the soul.

BABY'S OUTFIT.

Handmade and Smart Baskets For Smart Babies.

Never were baby things daintier than they are at present, and fond godmothers have no duty to complain of the lack of variety or of beauty in available gifts. This being a long season, the goods of the line, cambric, lawn or muslin are marvels of fine loveliness with their inset motifs, their intricate, edgings and foundings of lace. The fashionable lines, point de veauise, milauise, eliny and valencienais, are well represented on these gowns in connection with hand embroidery. Swiss embroideries are also used. Of course the better robes are entirely handmade.

Delicate bonnets are of cream corded silk lined with lace. Fine lace and muslin fashion other caps, while caps of Irish crochet lace over muslin are also available.

Little crocheted and knit shoes in silk and wool are available, while novelties are kid shoes as soft as silk and in such colors as rose, forget-me-not, sage or pale green. Silk shoes, hand embroidered, are also to be had. Bibs are veritable works of art. Irish linen bibs covered with hand embroidery or trimmed with lace or embroidered in colors and garnished with lace are to be had for baby's neck.

Elegant cot sets are shown in the fashionable shops, the up-to-date traveling basket being particularly attractive. Some of these are of white wicker, with lids and trays to match. They are beautifully decked with muslin or lace and knitted with ribbons to match those worn by baby. The underpart of the basket holds a baby's outfit, the upper part holding toilet articles.

Pideau Hall.

Rideau Hall, soon to become the official residence of the Duke of Cornwall as Viceroy of Canada, is to have $50,000 spent upon it in preparation for royal occupancy. Many Canadians think it is to be a modern altogether, and dignified Governor House erected in its stead. Rideau Hall, originally a modest mansion on the outskirts of Ottawa, has become a curious and unsightly conglomeration of styles and architectural styles, having added something in accordance with his own peculiar taste. It is a startling contrast to the stately Governor House, Melbourne, which another Governor of Canada is going to inhabit.

About Wild Pigeons.

In a recent issue of the Chilliwack Progress, says the Vancouver World, is a section on the life of the Pigeon of May 14, twenty years ago. In view of the fact that $1,000 is now offered for wild pigeons, the following excerpt is interesting: "The farmers are complaining of the wild pigeons devouring their saw-sown grain."

THE WELSH INVASION.

The Cymric Race is Pushing to the Front in London.

Clever young men in England get less attention than their contemporaries in France or in the United States, for the English need solid and not being proud of merit before they raise their voices and say: "He is great." This is especially true of the world of art and letters.

Yet today seems to be the day of the "young" writer in England, and but two linings by the most effective kind of Welshman among the newcomers is striking.

As it is, they have taken their turn in Fleet street, which first succumbed to the Irish and then to the Scotch, and they have invaded the realms of book-publishing as well.

First among the younger literary set of the day is Alfred Noyes, who is regarded as a "certainty," if one may be pardoned the expression, for the Post Laureate.

Noyes is 28. He was famous at 22. Yet he is untypical. An orthodox, athletic-looking young man, clean-cut, "Oxford," but full of the Celtic fire. He writes like a Cymric (Welshman); his fairy tales and tinkling verse are Welsh in spirit, though he is not enough poet to be international. "Drake," that rather long but stirring epic, the ballad of the "Forty Singing Seamen," and the very poem he dislikes most of all his work, the "Barrel Organ," are known to all readers of English verse.

Noyes has been influenced by Oxford—more by his at Exeter College—where the type of youth is the golden, excitable Celt, is a product of Wales in education. He is far different to the genial student of Oxford or the silently independent Cambridge man. He loves reading about the Welsh, and the very poem he dislikes most of all his work, the "Barrel Organ," are known to all readers of English verse.

He is far different to the genial student of Oxford or the silently independent Cambridge man. He loves reading about the Welsh, and the very poem he dislikes most of all his work, the "Barrel Organ," are known to all readers of English verse.

Two years ago C. W. Miles, a young newspaperman, founded the Welsh Bazaar, an already famous bazaar, and those who are on the lookout for new theatrical possibilities are particularly interested in the Welsh Bazaar. Miles is now editor of a leading London weekly, and is 27 years of age.

These are but two out of scores who could be named in literature—all of them are Welsh, and all of them are Scotch writer remarked, when reference was made in his hearing to the "Celtic plague," that might devour the metropolis: "It is the Welsh plague, you mean."

At the Cymric is coming to the front. There are a score of Welsh artists in London, all earning good money, and who are practically self-taught.

In music the Welsh are too well known to need further notice, but it is especially in dramatic art that they should prove interesting.

One average Welshman has a natural "artistic" sense. It is this that has enabled David Lloyd-George to reach the heights in his career. Although he is not a figurehead of English literature, yet he is a very notable and original writer. Mr. Lloyd-George appears to wonderful advantage in his own country. But should be heard speaking down in Wales among his own people. He is sometimes called "the House of Commons," but in Wales never. He knows that the people, his people, are with him, and he rises to dramatic heights that would astonish the stranger who knew not Wales and its inhabitants.

His Master's Leg.

Lord Brassey, who has announced his resignation, has a very peculiar hold many unique records, one being that he is the only colonial governor who has sailed to his colony in his own yacht—a feat which he successfully accomplished on his appointment as governor of Victoria.

After yachting, Lord Brassey's favorite recreation is cricket. On the magnificent grounds surrounding his beautiful Sussex seat matches are frequently played during the season.

Of one of these fights his lordship told a capital story. It appears that there was a scarcity of available talent, with the result that it was necessary to import a few players from the footmen as umpire. In due course the lordship himself went in, and a score of five was made. The second ball he stepped with his leg, and the cry was raised, "Brook's that?"

"What?" the footman who had to answer, and turning to his master, he exclaimed, in a half-apologetic tone, "Your lordship, I must say, 'Not at home,' your lordship."

"Not at home?" cried Lord Brassey. "Well, then, if you will have it," the footman made answer, "I mean you are home."

With That Sting.

Father B. was remarkable for his ready wit. On one occasion while traveling on a steambath well known to the Irish, he related to the priest's good graces said:

"Father, I should like very much to hear one of your sermons."

"Well, then, if you will have it," the footman made answer, "I mean you are home."

EMBROIDERED GOWN.

Attractive Needlework on the Season's Frocks and Blouses.

EMBROIDERED GOWN.

The fashion leaders have decreed that it should be hand needlework in every available feature of the summer's wardrobe. Blouses and dresses are covered with embroidery, some of them in white and some in colors. Puffing is coming in again, and so is cross stitch. Handmade lace, such as crochet Irish, are considered much smarter than anything done by machine. Gowns and blouses themselves are enlivened of more value if fashioned by hand. Naturally all this requires an ample purse unless the owner of the particular costume has been able to put her own handwork upon the dress. In that case extra strength is not needed, particularly in the case of little girls' dresses, which afford an unusually wide field for the exercise of artistic taste. Play groups also with quaint figures in colors are especially prized by young folks of the play age.

Muscles May Move Themselves.

Albert von Haeften, a Swiss surgeon of the eighteenth century, was the first to point out that the muscles of our bodies have an automatic action. Before Haeften's time it was believed that the muscles could not contract or swell up by themselves, but were drawn up by the action of tollion. Haeften discovered that they were not, but that a muscle, if irritated, would draw itself together automatically, even when it is quite separated from the nerves. This discovery has proved to be true by a great number of experiments. So that, though it is true our nerves are the cause of our moving, because they excite the muscles and so cause them to contract, yet the real power of contraction is in the muscle itself. The body of man is full of wonders, but the least of which is this automatic power of contraction in all muscles.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Camma.

The point on which most writers are at odds with the compositor is the comma. He is so fond of the particular punctuation point. He takes a delight in breaking up the flow of a sentence with an artistic punctuation. We all say, "Why then did you die?" to one breath. It is the compositor who says, "Why, then, did you die?" It is possible to be sure of the comma. It is his undeniable one. Edward Clodd in his memoir of Grant Allen tells the story of a compositor who dissented very strongly from just writer's moral philosophy and had to "net up" an interview with Allen in which the sentence occurred, "He is a happy martyr." He said his conscience by printing it "He is, happily, married."—London Chronicle.

A Cheerful Lie.

One time the late master of Afghanistan asked the English diplomatic agent at his court to give a description amid a crowd of Afghan chiefs of the largest gun in England. The Englishman described the 160 ton gun, and when he had finished the answer observed to his smiling subjects: "I have seen a gun the calibre of which was as large as the gun which has just been described to you." It would never do for an answer to be astronomical, much less to costume himself beaten.

Wild Catters at Work Again

Winnipeg—The Grand Trunk Pacific has issued formal warning against real estate men who are offering in the name of the railway company to sell lots in bogus townships along its lines in the western provinces, and has given notice that all such people will be prosecuted in the courts. D'Arcy Tate, solicitor for the company, states that various are now pending in the courts against six or seven concerns that are using the company's name, and that wildcatters will be brought to justice in an endeavor to prevent the repetitions of such misrepresentations as have already occurred in a number of cases.

This announcement is official, and states that the company itself has established all divisional points and stations, and that the sales will be made through its bona fide agents. The authorities cite as an example of fraudulent advertising the exploitation of the township of Alick, on the Calgary-Edmonton line of the Grand Trunk Pacific. This has been widely advertised as a divisional point and lots have sold at correspondingly high figures. As a matter of fact, the actual divisional point is at Mirror, some six miles away from the township of Alick, and the railway company has no interest whatever in the township but named. Other instances are cited where the Grand Trunk Pacific's name has been used to sell lots in townships miles away from any station, and without any authority whatsoever from the company. Action has been brought against the Grand Trunk Pacific transfer company of Vancouver to restrain that concern from future trading under the name of the big corporation, and will shortly be brought against the Grand Trunk Lands Co., which also is a private concern. Scores of real estate companies, employment agencies, hotels, livery stables, transfer companies and grocery establishments throughout the west make use of the name of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it is President Hayes' intention to put a stop to all unauthorized use of the name Grand Trunk Pacific by any private concern.

The use of the name by land companies is described as intended to mislead innocent purchasers, for the most part those who wish to buy lots for the increase in value following settlement of the surrounding country and the rapid growth of the towns themselves. Where there is no station service there will be no town, and such sales therefore would be fraudulent and lead to loss. The public is notified that all such intending purchasers should communicate direct with the railway's agency, the Transcontinental Township Company at Winnipeg and get the facts.

Edmonton Interprovincial
Stock Show

The Interprovincial stock show and race meet takes place at Edmonton this year on August 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th, coming after the Dominion Fair at Regina and followed by the Lethbridge Fair. Excursion rates have been granted by all railroads and an opportunity is given to all to visit the Capitol City of Alberta when it can be seen at its best.

The directors of the Edmonton exhibition aim to make stock the leading feature of their fair and have appropriated $150,000 to be expended on stock buildings alone. The fair grounds are splendidly laid out. The race track is second to none in Canada, as well as the grand stand and stock buildings. The Parker shows, the largest of their kind on the road, will make the Midway one of the most entertaining ever seen in Alberta. High class attractions have been obtained for the grand stand attractions platform, and the display of fireworks, which have been especially made for the coronation year, will exceed anything seen in Edmonton before.

Applications for industrial space have been pouring in for a month, 75 race horses have been entered in the stake entries alone. There still remains the purse entries, the running stakes and purses, and it is expected that at least 125 horses will be in the stables before the opening day, August 15th.

Three special freight trains of stock, race horses and attractions will be run to Edmonton from the Dominion Fair at Regina. No one can afford to miss the great western fair, race meet and stock show to be held at Edmonton on the 15th to 19th of August next. Keep these dates open and see the beautiful capital city of Alberta during fair week. Plenty of hotel accommodation and lots of amusement and attractions.

Grain Raising Experiences
By A. E. R.

Try a small patch of spring wheat as follows: Sow grain two inches deep before frost comes and pack around solid. You will find that the grain will come up earlier in the spring and will also ripen earlier. The grain sprouts from the winter moisture.

When sowing your fall wheat take a bushel of wheat and a peck of barley to the acre, and the barley will grow higher than the wheat in the fall and will make a good protection for the wheat in the winter. The barley of course will not grow in the spring but the wheat will have a much better start.

These plans have been tried and have proved very successful.

July Rod and Gun

"Following the Fur Trails," a story of the fur trade in the west, every Canadian, opens the July number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont. In this story Mr. R. J. Fraser, who is engaged on the Hydrographic survey, relates interesting incidents of the eight months' stay of the party engaged in survey work in the neighborhood of Hudson's Bay, and tells of an attack upon the camp by polar bears. He gives particulars of the fur trapping in which the party engaged and the excellent results of their work. The strenuous outdoor journey from Fort Nelson to Winnipeg supplies excellent reading. There is much variety in the other stories, both fishermen and hunters receiving due attention and stories and experiences from the far east as well as from the far west are included. They hunt on horseback in British Columbia, showing the difference in the conditions between those prevailing in that province and those existing in Eastern and central Canada. There is much more of interest to every sportsman in this number. It should be found in every summer camp. No pleasure companion for whiling away a pleasant hour is needed.

Directors Meeting

A meeting of the directors of the Agricultural Society was held on Saturday afternoon in the fire hall to discuss matters connected with the coming Fair on Wednesday, October 4th. The directors present were Messrs. Johnson, Dageford, Kennie, Clark, Kiner, Hardy, Osmond, Geddes and Secretary Atkins.

Mr. P. G. Johnson acted as chairman.

The first matter taken up was the revision of the prize list. Several additions were made and the directors in charge of the several departments were appointed. The prize list is to be proceeded with at once.

The question whether a building should be erected for the display of ladies work, roots, vegetables, etc., was taken up. Some of the directors felt that with the large prize money offered the financial condition of the society would not warrant this expenditure, while the majority thought that something along this line should be done instead of spending money every year for tent hire. It was also stated that the actual cost of the building need not be very large as those directors who were present either promised to help themselves or pay help to erect same, and it was thought there were lots of others in the society who would do the same if the matter was taken up at once before the busy season commenced. However, the matter was left in the hands of the following committee to find out what the building at Olds cost and to go into the matter: Messrs. Norman Clark, W. Hardy, H. E. Osmond and J. C. Kiner. The meeting then adjourned.

Must Be Vaccinated

Dr. G. M. Reed, the medical health officer, has received a copy of the new public health act and it contains many new clauses that the public should be made aware of. Here are one or two of the new clauses:

On and after the first day of January, 1912, no pupil shall be admitted to any school unless and until he produces evidence of successful vaccination.

Provided that in rural districts this regulation shall not apply, where by reason of distance from medical attendance, its enforcement would work a hardship.

MILK

Every person who sells or purveys to sell milk for use in every city, town or village, shall first obtain a license from the local board.

COMMON DRINKING CUPS

On and after the first day of January, 1912, no cup, glass or other utensil used for drinking purposes or ordinarily known as "common drinking cup," in schools, hotels, boarding houses, apartment houses, tenement buildings, theatres, public buildings and factories, or in connection with any public drinking fountain or faucet in any street or park, shall be provided for common public use.

TYPHOID FEVER

Typoid fever now comes under a new regulation called "Modified Quarantine," and a placard has to be affixed to the house.

The penalties for violating any of the provisions of the new act will be a fine of not more than $50 and costs, and the Criminal Code will apply to all prosecutions.

Vote of Thanks

TAKEN AT THE SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST CAMP MEETING

Whereas the C. P. R. and C. N. R. has shown no little interest in the work of this denomination by granting liberal rates to its members at the time of our annual gathering and special favors to our clergy, therefore Resolved, that this body, in conference assembled, do express their heartfelt appreciation for these courtesies by a vote of thanks.

Whereas, the citizens of Didsbury have contributed largely to the success of this gathering by their kindness in assisting to supply our temporal needs and by their interest in general, and the press for the notices of meetings, etc., therefore Resolved, that we extend to all citizens and the press a vote of thanks in appreciation of their services and interest.

Obituary

Mrs. Cora Wilson was born in Holt county, Missouri, June 21st, 1852, and grew to womanhood at the same place, where she was united in marriage December 17th, 1891, to Chas. E. Wilson of Holt county, Missouri, and of this union were born eight children, the eldest, a daughter, having preceded the mother in death.

Mrs. Wilson united with the Christian church when 10 years of age, and has lived the life of a consistent Christian ever since. She departed this life July 22nd, 1911, at the age of 59 years, 1 month and 1 day. She leaves to mourn her early demise a loving husband and seven children, the youngest of whom is still an infant, besides many other relatives and friends.

May the Lord by His sustaining grace support the bereaved husband and children through this severe trial.
